Tambi is a successful business owner looking for love, which she finds in the form of Richard - or so she thinks. When Flipping The Script begins, Tambi has just summarily been dumped and kicked out of the home she shared with her cheating insecure ex. Tambi was his meal ticket and while he loved it, he was also intimidated by her success. So, as things like this tend to happen, Tambi moved on and found her happiness in the form of a big tall billionaire drink of water called Mark, much to the chagrin of Richard, whose upgrade (supermodel) turned out to be a downgrade (stripper). Micaela Dartson Hicken fantastically weaves together the lives of several prominent and not-so-prominent Texans in an impeccable fashion. The way the story goes from Mark and his Nana to Yvette and Brad and even Richard and Sunny is flawless. It feels as though the reader is watching a well-crafted film rather than a carefully woven story.

As Flipping The Script progresses, it becomes clear that, in addition to being a heartless jerk, Richard is also a bit on the crazy side. After kicking Tambi to the curb, he misses her and wants her back. I mean, who wouldn't take back a guy who kicked them out and belittled their creative passion, right? When her success in life and love continues, it unhinges Richard and he vows revenge. The beauty of this story is in its telling, which Micaela Dartson Hicken does beautifully. The natural way the love story between Tambi and Mark unfolds is incredible and kept me smiling through much of the story. The secondary characters are all incredible, but particularly Rose and Yvette are a riot that will have you laughing each time they appear on page. Flipping The Script is a great story full of wonderful characters, love, suspense, and laughter.

Author Biography

 Born and raised in Dallas, Texas, Micaela Dartson Hicken fell in love with writing while working on her elementary school newspaper, "The Crusader". With an interest in science and a love for literature, she desired to major in both English and Biology Pre-Medicine, at Xavier University of Louisiana. With her science labs conflicting with the times the English courses were offered, Micaela majored in Biology and minored in Chemistry, thus earning her BS. Micaela went on to earn her doctorate in Podiatric Medicine at Barry University in Miami Shores, Florida and from there, completed her residency at Michigan Hospital and Medical Center in Detroit, Michigan. Micaela currently practices in Dallas and Ft. Worth, Texas. Micaela created A Little Texas Entertainment Company, LLC in 1999 and has been creating literary works ever since. Aside writing screenplays and books, Micaela is owner of the film company Two Chix Flix, LLC, and has currently written and produced two short films. She also writes with her best friend, Dimitri Logan. The other love of her life is her husband, Randy. She has two brothers, an identical twin sister, Dr. Myrna Dartson, and four step-children. Micaela is also a member of Women in Film.Dallas, and the Dallas Screenwriters Association.
