You Don't Know Me by Margaret Groh is a wonderfully complex murder mystery. Aging socialite Catherine Preston decides to visit her old friend in Philadelphia, forgetting that she died years ago. When she finally returns home, a vial of insulin is found in her purse – it's been tampered with, and she doesn't know where it came from. Her granddaughter is an investigative reporter, and her bid to find out what happens uncovers a plan to murder Catherine. Meanwhile, Judith's husband has died suddenly, and she's in line to be the new candidate for governor of Pennsylvania. It's her lifelong dream, and nothing and no one will get in her way. What's the connection between the three women, and how was Judith's husband involved? What started as forgetfulness is about to turn into a deadly game of cat and mouse.

You Don't Know Me by Margaret Groh is a stunning read that will captivate you right from the start. The action begins on the first page, and there's no letup as you set off on an incredible journey of intrigue with some wonderfully strong female characters. Each one is carefully developed into a real person that many will identify with in some way, and each has real-life flaws and personalities. This is a twisty story that keeps you guessing and takes you places you don't expect to go. It is a murder mystery, but also a story of courage and strength in the face of adversity, and the power of friendship and family. This is an amazing book that will affect you in so many different ways. Highly recommended to anyone who needs to see that there is always a light at the end of the tunnel.
